INTRODUCING A NEW VIDEO TAPE SERIES:

"When Students Write"

by Ralph Fletcher and Joann Portalupi

Tape 1 "Building a Writing Community"

Students need to assimilate a daunting number of skills as they become competent writers and that doesn't happen overnight. Writing teachers need to create the kind of community where students can live as writers, find their voices, and take risks that allow them to develop competence as writers. The teachers and principal at Bailey's Elementary School show how they create this atmosphere.

Tape 2 "Teaching Writing Skills In Context"

We explore how skilled writing teachers teach mechanics, such as contractions and spelling. You will see what management tools teachers devised to assess students' needs in skills instruction and how they situate skills teaching in a larger, real-world context.

Tape 3 "Literature That Supports Writing"

This tape focuses on the reading-writing connection.

Tape 4 "Craft Lessons to Stretch Young Writers"

This tape talks about what a craft lesson is, how you teach one, and how you know what lesson to teach.
